Dear Dr. Henney:

I am very concerned about the indiscriminate use of antibiotics in animal food merely for the convenience of large scale "factory" farms. The increasing number of bacteria which are resistant to antibiotics is a ticking time bomb.

Last year, I had a serious infection from an unknown source. If it were one of the "resistant" bacteria, I wouldn't be here now. My bacteriologist was able to treat it with 2,000,000 units of Penicillin E per day - a heavy dose. I can tell you we are both very concerned about this problem.

Please, reduce the use of antibiotics in animal feeds.

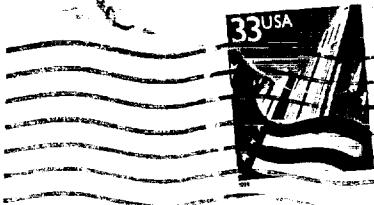

Sincerely,

Steve Hopkins
